RECENT ENDORSEMENT

As a U.S. Senator, Maria has worked hard on behalf of Washington state. On the economy, she's helped boost Washington's economy and create jobs by supporting longtime state industries such as aerospace, trade, and agriculture, and by cultivating new ones, such as software and biotechnology. She's been a leader on energy and environmental issues in the Senate, leading the fight to protect our public national forests with the Roadless Rule. She believes we must become independent from Middle East oil and she successfully led the fight to block the Republican energy plan. Maria has also worked for strong relations between the US and Israel. She supports a woman's right to choose and has fought for better education opportunities for children nationwide and greater access to quality health care.

RECENT ENDORSEMENT

On November 7, 2000, Judge Susan Owens was elected the seventh woman to serve on the Washington State Supreme Court. She joined the Court after serving nineteen years as District Court Judge in Western Clallam County, where she was the County's senior elected official with five terms. Justice Owens is passionate about domestic violence issues that impact children, and judicial education in that area. She has trained judges from Anchorage to Albuquerque, and participated in the writing of the Northwest Tribal Judges Domestic Violence Manual. She lectures at the National College of Prosecuting Attorneys' Domestic Violence Conference. She is committed to ongoing efforts in this very important area of law.
